Why it's so hard to compare early childhood education and care across the world

By Eric Charbonnier

Analyst, OECD Directorate for Education and Skills

There is a growing consensus across the world about the importance of quality early childhood education and care (ECEC). Evidence shows that participating in high-quality ECEC can have a positive effect on children's well-being, learning and development in the first years of their lives.

Pre-primary education around the world: How can we provide quality universal early education for all?

The COVID-19 pandemic has impacted almost every aspect of daily life but presents an added burden on families with young children. Closures of preschools and child care centers have put a strain on caregivers to meet all of the developmental needs of children at home.

Pre-primary education around the world: How can we provide quality universal early education for all?

The Center for Universal Education recently hosted a virtual roundtable that examined the current state of pre-primary education around the world.

Education Every child has the right to learn.

On any given school day, over 1 billion children around the world head to class.

More children and adolescents today are enrolled in pre-primary, primary and secondary education than ever before. Yet, for many of them, schooling does not lead to learning – and this was before COVID-19 shuttered schools and disrupted learning across the globe, creating an urgent need to reimagine education.

How do early childhood education systems differ around the world?

Early childhood education and care (ECEC) has experienced a surge of policy attention in OECD countries in recent decades, with a focus on children under the age of 3. On average across OECD countries in 2018, 26% of children under 3 were enrolled in early childhood education (ISCED 0).

Indicator B2. How do early childhood education systems differ around the world?

There is a growing consensus among OECD countries about the importance of high-quality early childhood education and care (ECEC). However, the type of ECEC services available to children and parents in OECD countries differ greatly.

Which Curriculum is Best for My Child?

Such a critical decision. Being a parent is the most important job you will ever have, and the most indispensable. Parents draw on their knowledge of the past to point the way to the future, giving their sons and daughters the background they will need to move forward and make their way in an ever-changing world.

Global Education

Education is widely accepted to be a fundamental resource, both for individuals and societies. Indeed, in most countries basic education is nowadays perceived not only as a right, but also as a duty – governments are typically expected to ensure access to basic education, while citizens are often required by law to attain education up to a certain basic level.<sup>1</sup>

Quality of Education

Increases to the quantity of education – as measured for example by mean years of schooling – has, for a long time, been the central focus of policy makers and academic debate. While increasing the access to education is important, the actual goal of providing schooling is to teach skills and transfer knowledge to students in the classroom. This entry focusses on the outcomes of schooling – the quality of education.

What is Positive Education, and How Can We Apply It? (+PDF)

All parents want the best for their children. They want their children to be happy and to flourish. They want them to live out their dreams and reach their innate potential. The challenge, however, is finding the right education model. One that doesn’t stifle their potential nor produce cookie-cutter pupils.
